vating the Strawberry. We prefer planting in the spring as early as the We prefer plauting in the spring as early as the ground will permit; but potgrown plans set in August or September will produce a good crop the next season. For garden culture, the most convenient method is to plant in beds four fact wide, three rows in coch bed, and plants one foot apart in the row. Thoroughly enrich the soil, dig deep, keep deam of weeds, cover lightly in winter with corn stalks or some coarse litter, take off in the spring, dress the beds and much with the same litter or word grass from the lawn.

Plant a new bed every year, spade under after the second crop, and so insure plenty of berries, and evade unsignity beds.
